

What is a theory?

- It is necessary for finding solutions to problems.
- It is a tool for understanding the world, the policy process, and for understanding policy change.

Deductive and Inductive Reasoning

- Deductive reasoning is the reasoning process from one or more general statements (premises) to reach a logically certain conclusion.
- Inductive reasoning is the reasoning process from a set of specific observations to reach a general conclusion.