

Shared ideas among several approaches to policy change theories:

- policy making is complex
- decision makers are bounded in their rationality
- individuals are serial processors of information
- participation is more or less open, but not equal in terms of influence and power
- information is imperfect and incomplete

Kingdon's Multiple Streams Framework